2021-2022 Season Outlook: *

Sacramento State is returning to play after what was a tumultuous year and half with the Covid-19 pandemic shutting down the last part of the 2020 season and not having a season at all in 2021. Sacramento State enters the 2021-22 season with hopes of winning its first Pacific Central Conference championship. This will be year five for head coach Rashad Baadqir who will rely on key returning veteran players in team 2-time golden glove centerfielder Sierra Silva (Sr), former top 2019 recruit and team freshmen of the year shortstop Savannah Troyer now a junior, and junior second baseman Sophia Sison as leaders of a young and solid group of players. Silva and Troyer are leading candidates for earning All-Region and All-American post season accolades with their talent and experience. Among 2021 recruits and newcomers who will wear the Green and Gold will be a pair of freshmen in catcher Carley Isola and pitching sensation Mia Perry who was a 3-year varsity starter in high school and power hitting JC transfer student Samantha Netherton who will play at first base and designated hitter. The Hornets will have another strong non-conference schedule with key games at NAIA school Simpson University in Redding, CA., at American River Community College (Sacramento) and at NCSA club teams Oregon and Cal State Fullerton. The Hornets expect to contend with annual rivals UC Davis and UC Merced in the Pacific Central as the conference welcomes new member Cal to become another rival team. If the Hornets can build on what was started in 2020 and take that next step they will be a force to take notice of in 2022 and expect to see them in the NCSA world series in Georgia.

Interesting/fun facts about your team:

The Hornets have increased their win record in each year it has been a member in NCSA since 2016
